

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

What is The Line?

The Line is a publication of the Frontline Research & Learning Institute that is dedicated to encouraging ideas, insight and civil discourse on the most pressing K-12 education issues. The Line debuted in March 2017 and prints twice yearly. Web-exclusive content is featured online at TheLineK12.com/discourse.

What will be accomplished at this dinner?

With a little encouragement from the facilitators, we hope the evening will unfold like a really great dinner party, where you are surrounded by good company and conversation.

As we share dinner, we'll talk about how we can come together to solve problems and exchange ideas and information about K-12 education and what we can do as leaders to improve outcomes for the next generation.

At The Line, we value candid conversation and expect we'll talk about the facts AND engage in the respectful expression of opinion and perspective. This is the only way we can get to the ideas that advance change.

Who should I expect to attend?

Around the table you'll find leaders from the left, right and center who are education advocates, community organizers, teachers, philanthropists, government officials, policymakers and researchers.

What is the attire?

Please plan for business casual attire.

Do I need to prepare in advance?

Advanced preparation is not required, however if you'd like to learn more about The Line please visit TheLineK12.com/discourse or the FrontlineInstitute.com.

What are the topics of conversation?

The dinners will be focused on why civil discourse is important in education and hot topics in education.
